

Windsor Rotary funds critical research

Justine Doherty
May 19, 2016, 10:25 a.m.

(Rotary race day chairman Harry Grange, Liz Wynn from the Children's Cancer Institute, and Windsor Rotary president Terry Munsey when they handed her the cheque.)

WITH research the way forward for cancer treatments, Windsor Rotary did the hard yards funding this critical quest.

With a particular interest in research for children's cancers, the club raised the money at February's Windsor Rotary Projects Race Day at Hawkesbury Race Club.

At Windsor Rotary's May 4 meeting Jennifer Philips from the Children's Medical Research Institute was given $5000 after she talked to members about the exciting and promising directions that their current research was taking them.

Then the following week Liz Wynn from the Children's Cancer Institute was also given $5000. At the meeting she spoke about the work the Institute undertakes making sure any discoveries are progressed into actual treatments for kids with cancer as quickly as possible.