

The Armidale Express

Cycling for kids cancer research

By MEG FRANCIS
Sept. 11, 2015, 9 a.m.

PEDAL POWER: Stephen Ramage will be hitting the pavement to raise money for children suffering from cancer.

A LOCAL man is jumping back on the bike for children with cancer.

Stephen Ramage plans to ride 1000 kilometres next month for the Great Cycle Challenge to raise money for children fighting cancer.

Mr Ramage said this was his second year involved and was hoping to raise $2000 to help children fighting cancer.

“I wanted to get on the cause, it’s not fair for children,” he said,

“Cancer is bad enough but for little kids having to fight it.”

The Great Cycle Challenge is a national fundraising event for kids cancer research at the Children’s Medical Research Institute and involves participants setting riding targets to raise money.

“The community really got behind me last year and I raised over $1800.

“Kids should be out there enjoying life instead of fighting for their lives.”

Community members can donate on Mr Ramage’s fundraising page here.