THESE Earle Page College students are preparing to put on quite a show and it's all for a good cause.

The University of New England students are in the process of collecting clothes from city businesses for their annual charity Coast Run fashion show.

The winter wonderland themed event is on at 6.30pm on May 16 at the Servies.

Organisers say besides supporting a good cause it will showcase the latest looks for the coming cooler months.

Coast Run convenor Jessica Brien said the organising committee was in full swing preparing for the event, which includes setting up the venue and providing refreshments.

"It's been pretty gruelling to put together, we started organising last year," Ms Brien said.

“But it will all be pretty gratifying when it’s done and we’ve raised some money for a good cause.”

The Earle Page College Coast Run is in its 36th year, with the fashion parade celebrating its 22nd showing.

All money raised will go to the Children’s Medical Research Institute.

“We hope to beat last year’s amount raised of $6000 and raise $6500 this year,” Coast Run committee member Matthew Griffin said.

The event is organised completely by students with most of the 200 Earle Page College students attending.

Tickets to the event are $25.
